

SURPLUS OF ORDINARY REVENUE FOR ALBERTA IN PRESENT YEAR, CLAIM OF BONDHOLDERS' EXPERTS

The 1936-37 Alberta budget, in its revised form as recommended as feasible by the Elliott-Walker report (in which James C. Thompson, chartered accountant, and former provincial auditor, was the technical advice, shows a cash surplus of $1,434,534 after taking into account all ordinary expenditures of government, and provision for more than $7,000,000 of interest.

The report estimates the revenue of the government for the year at $20,131,703, which is some $50,000 more than the original budget of reductions in revenues are in the amount likely to be received from taxes. License fees are increased by $578,000 because it is argued that the change in the due date of motor licences is a non-recurring loss which should be included in any calculation of the province's ability to pay its way. Some moderate business

The suggested budget would top $25,000 off educational costs of more than $2,400,000, $62,400 off the cost of legislation, and $24,000 from the cost of administration of justice. But more than $50,000 is added to proposed charitable grants need $200,000 to the estimated needs of those on relief. This last item would, on this basis, require $1,697,066 in the current year.

Except for $188,000, the Elliott-Walker floor at budget-making provides for an stacking funds, contracted with $858,453 in the original budget, but interest is projected totaling $7,224,488. With ordinary revenues at $90,131,703, the ordinary expenditures would be $18,099,885, leaving $1,434,834 for and this surplus and $192,216 (additional) on public buildings, interest, telephones, highways, etc., and miscellaneous loans and advances. The last two would require the bulk of the sum, $56,434 for highways, bridges and ferries, and $39,782 for loans and advances.

Science View Enzymes

Revealed As Not Living, But A Mere Chemical

Yale University solved the mystery of enzymes, the substances which keep man's tissues alive, by showing one of them at work for the first time. The enzyme revealed is said to be a mere chemical, present in action as soon as water is added.

Yale scientists suspected that enzymes were alive.

The enzyme action was made visible by Dr. Kurt G. Stern, visiting lecturer in physical chemistry, by showing one of them at work for the first time. The enzyme revealed is said to be a mere chemical, present in action as soon as water is added.

The next step is to place in the tube the chemicals which the enzyme turns in the living body, and look at a live process created, visibly under glass.
